DEDICATION.

Gwarthmore, around thy classic halls such loving memories cling,
That in the light of other years, sweet solace they will bring;
Thou hast extended to us a faithful, watchful care,
And made the path to learning's fount most beautiful and fair;
Within thy walls we've ever found most loyal friends and true,
Enabling us with cheerful hearts our studies to pursue;
The words of loving counsel that unto us were given,
Fell oftentimes on our grateful hearts like gentle dews from heaven,
Beloved Alma Mater, while life its sweetness brings,
While round thy stately granite walls the mantling ivy clings,
While reason holds her sacred throne thy children we will be,
And to thee dedicate this book, the gift of Ninety-Three.

Entered according to the Act of the Class of Ninety-Three, in the year 1892, by the Board of Editors, in

BOARD OF EDITORS.

INTRODUCTION.

AS we launch this bark of ours upon the sea of college life, we would beg leave to remind our readers of a few facts concerning its composition. It is entirely unnecessary, we know, to offer any explanations to our fellow students. They know how HALCYONS are made, far better, they will tell you, than we ourselves.

Those who are unfamiliar with Swarthmore we would inform that we are not excused from all class-room duties in consideration of our labors upon the HALCYON. In point of fact this work is the product of leisure moments culled from the first semester of the college year. Whatever of incompleteness has crept into it, kindly attribute to this cause. We claim for our little book, not the possession of a classic literary merit, but only the virtue ever most highly prized by all true-hearted wearers of the garnet—it is purely Swarthmorean.

And now, ere we lay down our faithful pen, we fain would say a word by way of introducing the volume to the readers it is so soon to meet. To those in whose strong armor of perfection we have found some flaw, however large or tiny it may be, and thrust therein our harmless spear of friendly banter, we would say, take the jest as we give it, in purest fun and without a single touch of malice or ill-will. To you, good Seniors, we would add, you have experienced your HALCYON days, a fact to which a few dents upon our own armor bear ample testimony. The year has passed and ours is the opportunity to wield the weapon, but better that it should never come than it should teach us to practice one ungenerous or unkindly thrust. Under-classmen, yours are the possibilities of the future, and may we all find enjoyment in your return of these pleasantries.

The period since the last HALCYON appeared has been one of progress in every department of the college. The advent of the new executive is the central event around which are grouped numerous others of importance tending to the prosperity of our Alma Mater. Indeed, so thoroughly has this spirit permeated the college that the HALCYON has deemed it eminently fitting to recognize the fact by publishing a collection of the most popular Swarthmore songs so dear to every student's heart.

To the kind friends who have assisted us in the preparation of this volume, whether in the artistic, the literary or the musical department, we desire to tender our sincerest thanks. Especially do we wish to acknowledge the art contributions of Prof. Milton H. Bancroft, Miss E. M. Hallowell, George W. Warner, ex-'93 (originally a member of our staff), Julius Staab, '93, and R. Caldwell Manning, '93, all of whom have labored earnestly for the success of our art pages.

And now, not without regret, do we relinquish our pens and our pencils, realizing that our work is finished and the ties that bind us to our protégé about to be severed, and with this thought there comes a mingled feeling of satisfaction and of pathos. The work our classmates entrusted us to perform is brought, we hope, to a successful termination. The object of our labors is now about to leave our protecting care and face bravely and unaided the great world of college comment and criticism.

Sanctum sanctorum, thou silent witness of our labors, our difficulties, and our successes, fare thee well! And when another year rolls around mayst thou afford thy cheer and comfort to another band of literary pilgrims, who, like ourselves, will love thee and the happy associations that will ever cluster around thy name.

SWARTHMORE'S PRESIDENTS.

Edward Parrish.

THE first President of Swarthmore College began his short but eminently useful career, in Philadelphia, in the year 1822. His early education was obtained in the Friends' schools of that city. This completed, he entered the College of Pharmacy, from which institution he was graduated when but twenty years of age.

Thoroughness and exactness in the practice of his profession soon won for him an enviable reputation. Later in life, in recognition of his merit, he was made President of the American Pharmaceutical Association. Meanwhile, he had been performing most acceptable service as a lecturer in the College of Pharmacy, and been contributing largely to periodicals devoted to the interests of his profession.

About this time the Society of Friends was agitating, and not without cause, the subject of higher education, under its own care and influence. The conservatism of earlier times was beginning to give place to more liberal views upon the subject, as the need of a more thorough culture became apparent.

Many prominent Friends were interested in the work, and Edward Parrish was among the first to labor earnestly in its behalf. Naturally, we may say, he became the leader of the movement which culminated in the founding of Swarthmore College. In this great undertaking, fraught as it was with difficulties and discouragements, he labored with tireless energy.

EDWARD PARRISH,
First President of Swarthmore College.

In every possible way did he aid the enterprise. His voice and pen were active in its behalf, and, when the College became a reality, his was the master mind that guided its infant fortunes successfully through the period of its greatest danger and weakness.

The administration of Edward Parrish as President of the College was comparatively brief, his retirement during the term of 1870-1871 taking place more than two years prior to the graduation of the first class. But even at this early date President Parrish might well cease his labors, with the consciousness that his duty to Swarthmore College had been nobly performed.

Professor Magill had been intimately associated with the President in the work of organization, and to him the Board of Managers naturally turned in their selection of a new executive.

The death of Edward Parrish occurred in 1872, in the Indian Territory, whither he had gone, at the instance of the Government, to conclude a treaty with the red men.

Swarthmore cannot too highly honor the man who gave so much of his life's effort for the welfare of the institution, and who for its sake overcame manifold trials and difficulties. In his pure, noble life, President Parrish has bequeathed to Swarthmore and to the world an example worthy to be followed by all who would wish to make the world better for their having lived. His life was short only in years. In thoughts and deeds the full measure of three-score and ten were his.

“ We live in deeds, not years ; in thoughts, not breaths ;
In feelings, not in figures on the dial ;
We should count time by heart-throbs. He most lives
Who thinks most, feels the noblest, acts the best.”

Edward Hicks Magill.

A. M., LL. D.

DR. MAGILL was born in Solebury, Pa., in the year 1825, and he received his early education at the schools near his home, and at Westtown.

When but sixteen years of age he commenced his career as a teacher at the public school in his native town, where he taught for eight years, when, feeling the need of a college education, he determined to obtain it, and went to the Williston Seminary, in Massachusetts, to prepare for Yale. He entered the freshman class of that institution in 1850, but the next year he went to Brown University, from which he graduated, in 1852, with the degree of A. B. After a further course of study, in 1855 he received his second degree. He also holds the honorary degree of LL. D. from Haverford College.

After the completion of his college course, Dr. Magill again took up teaching, and became Principal of the Classical Department in the High School of Providence, Rhode Island. He was afterward First Assistant of Dr. Gardner, Principal of the Boston Public Latin School. In both of these institutions his work was attended with marked success.

His connection with Swarthmore dates from 1869, and he has always been one of the truest friends of the College, and one of its ablest workers. He first held the position of Principal of the Preparatory Department, but in 1871 he succeeded Edward Parrish as President of the College.

Largely to the efforts of Dr. Magill does Swarthmore owe her present position among her sister colleges. Finding that the number of students showed no increase, he made, in 1886, a tour through the Western States and Canada, lecturing upon "The Advantages of a Modern College Education." In the following year there was an increase of fifty students in the Collegiate Department, rendering it possible to abolish the lowest preparatory class.

EDWARD HICKS MAGILL, A. M., LL. D.,
Second President of Swarthmore College.

In 1889 Dr. Magill, feeling the need of rest after eighteen years of faithful work for the College, tendered his resignation, to take effect in the spring of 1890. It was accepted, and the intervening year he spent abroad, chiefly in Paris, pursuing the study of the French language and literature.

In the fall of 1890 he entered upon his duties as Professor of those branches at Swarthmore, which position he now holds.

Dr. Magill has devoted his entire life to the theory and practice of teaching, and has taken an active part in the educational movements of the day. "The Collegiate Association of the Middle States and Maryland" was started through his efforts, and his influence has always been used for advancing the most liberal methods of education.

William Hyde Appleton.

A. M., Ph. D.

DR. APPLETON is a native of Portland, Maine, and an alumnus of Harvard, from which University he graduated in 1864, after a most successful course, with the degree of A. B. After studying law in Providence, and receiving the degrees of A. M. and LL. B. from his Alma Mater, he returned to that institution, where for two years he held the position of Instructor in Greek.

Upon resigning this position, he went abroad to pursue his studies in the German Universities, and there he remained until 1872, when, through the influence of President Magill, he came to Swarthmore to take the Chair of the Greek and German Languages. This post he filled most ably for ten years, raising the standard in both branches.

In 1882 he was granted a year's leave of absence, and this time he spent abroad perfecting his knowledge of Greek and English literature. On his return to Swarthmore he was made Professor of the Greek and English Languages, which position he holds at the present time.

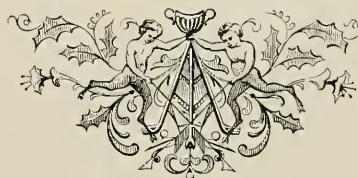

After the resignation of Dr. Magill, in 1889, Dr. Appleton was chosen acting President of the College, and he performed the duties of the office so successfully that in March of 1890 he was elected President by the Board of Managers. After due consideration, he declined the office, preferring to continue in the position which he had so long filled. He consented, however, to assume the duties of the President until a permanent successor could be elected. His administration terminated with the election of President De Garmo, at the opening of the present college year.

WILLIAM HYDE APPLETON, A. M., Ph. D.,
Third President of Swarthmore College.

What Dr. Appleton has done for Swarthmore has been accomplished through the medium of the class-room, and his influence upon the students cannot be too highly estimated.

William Dudley Foulke, A. M.

WILLIAM DUDLEY FOULKE, A. M., was born in New York, November 20th, 1848, and received his early education in the Friends' Seminary in that city. Entering Columbia College in 1865, he pursued his studies there for four years, winning various honors of a literary character, and graduating with distinction. Making the law his chosen profession, he entered Columbia Law School in 1869. From this institution he graduated in 1871, having, however, been admitted to the bar, in recognition of his marked ability, in the spring of 1870, while still a junior.

After his marriage, in 1872, he continued the practice of law in New York until 1876, when he removed to Richmond, Indiana, where he has since resided.

As a lawyer, as a statesman, and as a scholar, William Dudley Foulke has a just claim to our respect and admiration. His success in the first-named pursuit paved the way for his political advancement. As a member of the Indiana Senate, to which he was chosen in 1882, he gave ample evidence of his powers as a statesman by his warm advocacy of progressive and reformatory legislation, especially in the direction of the civil service, in the improvement of which he is actively interested. Although a believer in the general principles laid down by the Republican party, Mr. Foulke is in no sense a partisan politician, and his unwillingness to consider policy and expediency before justice and right has tended to debar him from accepting higher elective offices. His work has been accomplished largely in the State and National reform leagues, the former of which he himself organized in Indiana.

WILLIAM DUDLEY FOULKE, A. M.,
Fourth President of Swarthmore College.

Retiring from the practice of law in 1889, Mr. Foulke has since devoted himself to the gratification of his taste for literature and art, and to work in behalf of the various reforms in which he is interested.

It was in December, 1890, that he was tendered the Presidency of Swarthmore College, which honor he accepted. From the close of the winter holidays to the catastrophe of the 25th of February, 1891, the President-elect spent much time at the College, familiarizing himself with the routine of work, and by his dignified and kindly bearing earning the sincere regard of Faculty and students.

Preparations for a brilliant inauguration were already in progress when the bright outlook was suddenly clouded. Even while those interested in the College were congratulating the institution upon the prospects of further successes under the administration about to begin, a message was flashing over the wires fraught with sadness for the College and her President-elect.

The sudden death of Mr. Foulke's brother-in-law made it necessary for the former to return immediately to Richmond, and, a little later, to resign the position he is so well qualified to fill.

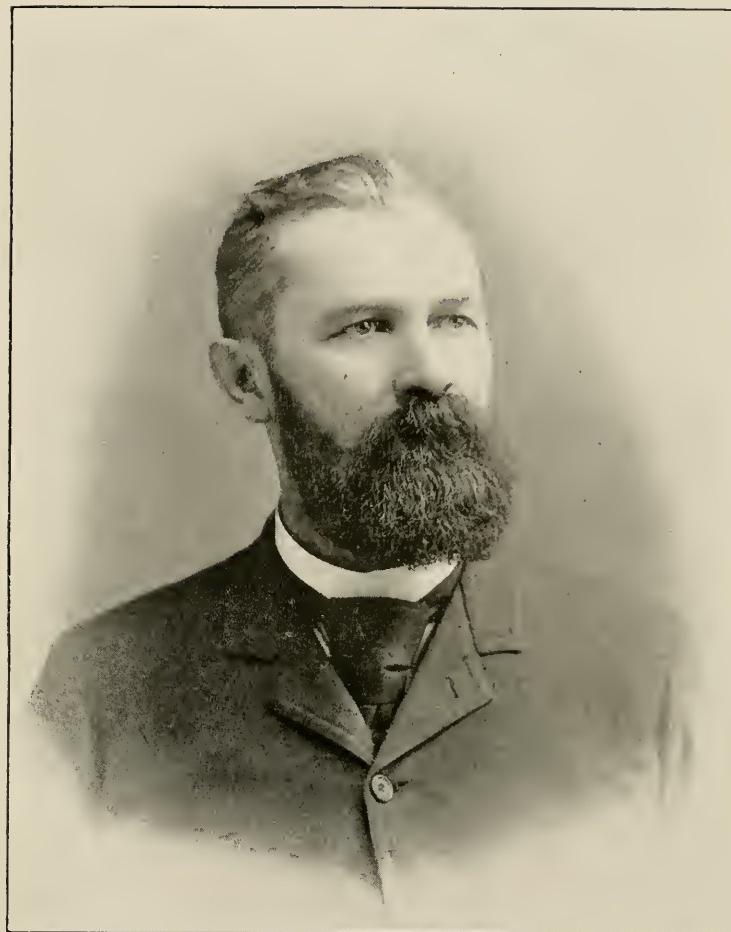

Charles De Garmo, Ph. D.

THE present executive head of Swarthmore brings to the position the energy and thoroughness which belong proverbially to the people of our wonderful West, joined with the classical culture of the best universities of the Old World. No period in the existence of our College could have been more opportune for the reception of President De Garmo than the present. It is with a feeling of pleasure not unmixed with expectation that THE HALCYON welcomes him to our midst, and with him a new era for Swarthmore.

Dr. De Garmo's scholastic education began in the public schools of Illinois, and ended with his graduation from the University of Halle, Germany, at which institution he obtained the degree of Ph. D. Aside from his own studies, both in this country and abroad, his life has been devoted almost entirely to the profession of teaching. He has made a most diligent and scholarly study of the art of imparting knowledge, and his works on pedagogics are authority.

President De Garmo was born in Wisconsin in 1849, and while a man of but forty-three years, his successes in his profession have been attained in various fields of labor. His career began as teacher in the public schools, which position he had held for but a short time when offered that of principal in the public school at Naples, Illinois. Professor De Garmo, however, soon returned to his Alma Mater, the Illinois State Normal University, where he occupied the position of assistant training teacher for seven years.

While still connected with the University, Dr. De Garmo and Professor E. J. James, at present at the University of Pennsylvania, established and conducted for a period of two years The Illinois State Journal, a paper devoted to the interests of education. This was just prior to his brilliant career in the German Universities of Jena and Halle. He remained abroad three years, in which time, by careful study and observation, he familiarized himself with those methods of education obtaining in the Old World.

CHARLES DE GARMO, Ph. D.,
Fifth President of Swarthmore College.

Returning to America, he again took up his work at Illinois State Normal University, this time as Professor of Modern Languages. Four years later he became Professor of Philosophy and Pedagogics in the Illinois State University, at Champaign, which position he held until called to the Presidency of Swarthmore College in September, 1891.

Dr. De Garmo is closely connected and in sympathy with the University Extension movement now occupying so much attention in educational circles. His literary works are all upon those subjects to which he has devoted the greatest study—Philosophy and Pedagogics.

LUCIUS E. WILLIAMS,

Assistant Professor of Chemistry.

DIED ELEVENTH MONTH 3d, 1891.

WHEREAS, An all-wise Providence has seen fit to call from us our former teacher, Lucius E. Williams, therefore be it—

Resolved, That we, the students of Swarthmore College, recognize the loss of an efficient teacher and earnest worker, as well as a valued friend, who, by his talents and genuine worth, has won the esteem not only of ourselves, but of all who knew him; and, further, be it—

Resolved, That we desire to express our admiration for the cheerfulness and fortitude displayed by him in the face of the most trying ordeal, and that we extend to his bereaved family our heart-felt sympathy.

CLASS OF '92.

MOTTO:—Esse quam videri.

COLORS:—Garnet and Black.

YELL:—“Hist, Boom, Boo, S. C., '92; Tiger!!”

OST noble, dignified, and learned Seniors—you who hazed us as Freshmen, who ridiculed us as Sophomores, and who criticise us as Juniors—with all the borrowed and feigned reverence we can assume, do we approach the task of delineating your character and enumerating your achievements.

Your well-meant endeavors to aid us on the road to fame and success we have duly appreciated, even though your example has been negative rather than positive in its influence. We have enjoyed your company, profited by your mistakes, and, by observing your great enterprises, always with a modest and humble mien, such as it becomes the youth to affect toward those of riper years, we have learned volumes on how not to do things. Even from the time you relieved us of our base-ball “back-stop” till you gave us, through the columns of the Phœnix, such a sage and paternal lecture on the evils of indulging in those emblems of wisdom, the cap and gown, we have recognized in you the powerful but misdirected zeal that has struggled so long and so vainly to make your record something more than a void in the history of the College. Your name has been as deeply carved upon the tablets of fame and glory as upon the burnished surface of the Phoenix cup or Child's trophy.

But despite the fact that it has been our fortune to be engaged in controversies of greater or less importance with you during the whole of the three years we have been together, we have learned at least to pity you, if not to revere you. In fact, we shall be sorry to lose your company when, next June, the cruel Commencement severs our connection, and marks the hour when we shall ascend (?) to the station you so lately occupied.

In parting, we can but heartily wish you the success your failures here must surely have prepared you to appreciate. Remember that in the cold and cruel world you will have no '93 to follow you wherever you go, correcting your errors, supplying your omissions, and dealing gently with your shortcomings, but, on the contrary, your mistakes will be viewed by disinterested and impartial judges, who, unlike ourselves, will not endeavor to excuse them, or to shield them from the critic's eye.

MOTTO:—Forwärts.

COLORS.—Gold and Black.

YELL:—“Whiff, Whack, Gold and Black,

Hoo Rar, '94,

Hiss Boom, Ah!”

CLASS ORGAN:—“The Gold and Black.”

HAT has happened to '94? Wherefore has this strange and unwonted silence settled on that noisy class? It is as easy to think of '92 without conceit as of '94 without commotion.

When you came you fairly took away our breath, '94, with the things you were going to do, but you did not learn sufficiently well that little saying, written in your copy-books not so long ago: "Actions speak louder than words."

You were in a dreadful hurry to decide on your motto, and as for your banner, you didn't give the girls time to make it.

Surely that was all due to your motto, Vorwärts: yes! That is a very good one if you always keep it in mind, but are you not aware that if each one follows his own inclination the class will not advance very rapidly?

Ninety-two gave you some excellent advice, '94, but then it is very easy for '92 to spare some of that. Why did you not profit by it? Talking does wonders, to be sure, if it is in the proper place, but talking never yet helped win cups, and never will.

Indeed, you might play base-ball. Then why didn't you?

You calmly and virtuously rested on the laurels of your one victory at foot-ball, as if you had conquered the world. You seem to have labored under the delusion that nothing more should be expected of '94; and such a thing as trying new fields apparently never entered your otherwise fertile brain. For again, though it is always the best plan to buy good, substantial articles, certainly, there is no reason why you should always pay more than '93, "though we must beat her."

Oh! wherefore, '94, did you keep the dear little freshman waiting so long and anxiously for his gay and festive welcome—your reception? It was heartless in you. Maybe it was in memory of a certain First-day morning, when '95 valiantly carried canes to meeting. Yours were—where?

We have endeavored in every possible way to convince you of your errors, '94, but it has been a thankless and well-nigh hopeless task.

Only Time, which cures all things, even verdant youthfulness, can help you, and in his hands we leave you with but a parting admonition: "There are a few things which you do not know."

*"If we knew whose feet were standing
Close beside the silent stream,
If we knew whose eyes were closing
In the sleep that knows no dream,
We should be so kind and tender,
Lightly judge and gently speak—
Let us act as if our vision
Saw the links that swiftly break."*

MOTTO:—Consilio et Animo.

YELL:—“Hoo rah vive! hoo rah vive!

Hoo rah! Hoo rah! '95.”

EARKEN! Fellow-students. We would make known to you a startling truth, that as yet has not dawned on your dull perceptions. We, the '95s, are here, and have been ever since last fall. One by one with bandbox and bundle we gathered from the four corners of the country, walked up the historic asphaltum, fondly expecting to find the entire college out in holiday attire to welcome us. But how crushed were our hopes, when on reaching the front door, and marching in, we saw—only our disappointed faces, reflected mockingly from the Pet.

Hasten Ashmend & Co. Ltd. Phila.

Thus it was each day ; new disappointments and slights, until we just all got into one of the class-rooms, and had a good cry.

For you see at home we are always consulted about everything, and we don't think even now you do everything as we would do it.

Well, as we said, having gotten into the class-room, and finding we needed a Constitution, we tried writing one, and found it very hard work. But now our Constitution has a great advantage over all others ; it isn't necessary to sign it unless one wants to.

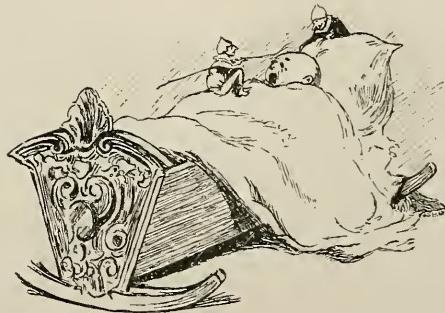

Then as a motto was the thing to have, to keep our spirits up when we are homesick, we decided on one. You see, last year '95s were subs., but they had a motto. So we just took that one, for it sounds well, and saved lots of trouble. The motto is "Consilio et Animo," and means, to be counselled by the upper classes, and to mind them. There is one thing we can do, and that is play foot-ball. Why, some day you will wake up and find us famous.

We have a pin, too, and it's awfully pretty. We wear them so we'll not get lost. All this while you ignored us, and called us green and freshies.

Now, remember, we are little fellows, and have dreadfully tender feelings—surely you will notice us after this appeal.

Humbly,

THE FRESHMEN.

MOTTO:—Ὕπόμην Πείρατα Παγτὸν ἐχει

ALTHOUGH you have been in our midst but a short time, yet in many ways you have demanded our attention.

In the first place, your utter disregard of parliamentary rules is appalling. When you elected your President last fall, you thought the mere fact of conferring upon him this honor would invest him with sufficient authority, without requiring him to sign the Constitution until his term of office had nearly expired; this is excusable in such immature minds, but to shield you from future ridicule, we advise the perusal of Robert's Rules of Order.

Houston, Ashmead & Co. Ltd. Phila.

Your motto is Greek, but many of you, beside not knowing how to pronounce it, have not the faintest idea how it should be translated, and seem surprised on being asked such a bold question. We trust you will not long remain in such woeful ignorance.

Now, '96, as you have no yell, and there seems to be a lack of originality in your ranks in this one direction, we beg you to accept a suggestion from your friends:

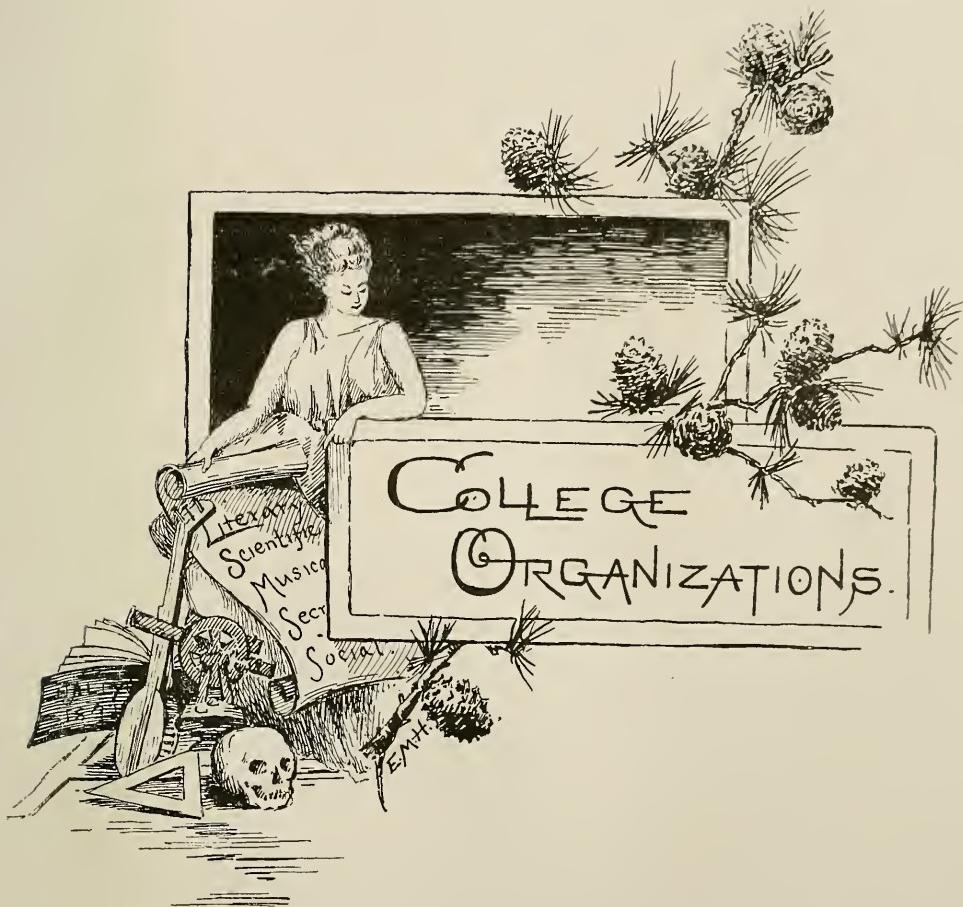

Boo-hoo ! Woe ! In a fix !
Home-ah ! Home-ah ! Ninety-six !

You have entered upon your college career with much more independence than is customary for such "young children," but permit us to whisper a word of warning, that the consequences may not be too humiliating : "Look before you leap."

COLLEGE ORGANIZATIONS.

WHATEVER may be the popularly conceived idea of the most important features of a college course, whether the majority decide in favor of the classical or the increasingly popular scientific courses, there is one phase of college life the utility and value of which are never questioned.

The required and elective curriculum contains very much that is of the greatest importance in every-day life, much that will smooth and polish the angles with which man seems naturally endowed. The mental discipline and the information acquired are of almost equal moment. Indeed, such is the value justly attached to the class-room side of college life that nearly all prospective students form their first impressions of the value of such a course wholly by the standard of opportunities for study in the lines they desire to pursue. Such an estimate is but natural, and we should not wish it otherwise.

But fortunately there is another side to the question, a view that embraces not only the Greek and the Latin, the chemistry and the mathematics, but also the profitable experience to be gained through active participation in the doings of the various college organizations of a literary, scientific, athletic, or social nature.

This phase of college life, in conjunction with the other, does more to broaden the intellect, and prepare the student for the world than the pursuit of books alone could ever do. In the class-room the student follows the lead and precepts of the professor; in the undergraduate organization he is thrown upon his own resources; he learns to think and decide for himself, and becomes experienced alike in the happy arts of leading and of following.

Such is the work of the literary and scientific societies. The mission of the athletic organizations is none the less important, for they have to deal not with muscle alone, but with rigorous mental discipline as well. The beneficial influences of track and field are felt in the class-room and in after life.

Nor are the purely social clubs to be looked upon with disfavor by the severest critic. They have their place as surely as have the more dignified and learned, and when limited by the dictates of moderation and good sense, as they are at Swarthmore, they accomplish most successfully their purpose, that of uprooting a spirit of hermit-like and constant drudgery, and planting instead warm-hearted friendship and cheerful industry.

In no small degree does Swarthmore owe its popularity to its undergraduate societies. Their successes have ever been identical with those of the institution. By them patriotism has been fostered, latent capabilities aroused, and a closer bond of union established between our Alma Mater and her loving children.

THE PHOENIX.

THE history of journalism at Swarthmore is a record of constant improvement and merited success. The Phœnix, the present and indeed the only official organ of the college in the way of a printed monthly periodical, was founded by the class of 1883 in their Junior year, and was at first intended for a class institution. A little later it was decided to make the Phœnix the representative of the whole college, and to this end the editors of the class of '83 chose students from the other classes to assist in the work, the results of their labors being submitted to a mass meeting of students, and receiving ratification.

Clippings from contemporary college papers testify to the merits of the Phœnix, even in its infancy, and the bright promises of future excellence then given have been amply fulfilled. Not only has the paper performed in a most satisfactory manner its function as the representative journal of Swarthmore and her students, but it has also won the merited respect and admiration of a large circle of contemporaries.

It is not our province to discuss the relations of the college paper to the institution it represents. Let it suffice to say, the Phœnix has ever striven, and with no small success, to make Swarthmore the better for its having existed. Not only has the paper been a warm advocate of progress and reform, but it has aided substantially both literary and athletic interest. The Phœnix Prizes for Junior oratory, and the Phœnix Cup for track athletics bear ample witness to this statement.

EUNOMIAN LITERARY SOCIETY.

URING the first two years of Swarthmore's existence, little was done in the way of founding associations of any kind, but as soon as the work settled into routine regularity, several of the students conceived the idea of forming a lyceum for improvement in literary subjects, and the present Eunomian stands as the product of their thoughtful, earnest work.

The eight founders of the society, Saml. E. Paschall, Ferris W. Price, Saml. B. Cooke, Howard W. Lippincott, Richard K. Valentine, Danl. S. White, Thos. W. Wilson, Wetherel B. Thomas, met in the early part of the year 1871, drew up a Constitution, and on the night of February 11th of the same year held their first meeting, in what we now call the studio. The Constitution was adopted and Samuel B. Cooke elected the first President.

In 1874 was established a library, which has since increased by many contributions to about one thousand volumes. During the next year two interesting events occurred, one, the change in the Society's name from Erodelphian to Eunomian (under good laws); the other, the discussion of a plan with the members of the Somerville for publishing a joint society paper, but as the Faculty did not look with favor upon the latter scheme, the plan was abandoned. The germ lingered, however, and with the rebuilding of the college in 1881 the planted seed budded forth in the form of the present Phoenix.

Five years ago the college fitted up the society room, which has ever proved a source of benefit and pleasure. A fund has been started by the active and ex-members to erect a suitable building for the Society's use. The Society has a total enrollment of 225 members, of whom 40 are active and 28 honorary.

Among many of Swarthmore's ever-increasing alumni, the name of the "Old Society" is cherished with pleasant recollections of college days, and of profitable work performed while an active member of the Eunomian.

SOMERVILLE LITERARY SOCIETY.

MOTTO :—Suaviter in Modo, Fortiter in Re.

COLOR :—White.

N important feature in the college life of the day is the society or club. It develops the individual, gives him a wider scope than can be found in academic departments alone, and, furthermore, encourages good-fellowship and mutual aid among the students.

Therefore, most naturally, we find three years after the opening of Swarthmore, the young women organizing a society, the better to broaden and perfect themselves in the field of literature. Thus originated the Somerville Literary Society, named in honor of a woman, the friend of philosophers and scientists, herself counted a worthy member of the circle —Mary Somerville.

The Society kept a steady pace with the growth and advancement of the college, never neglecting the first object of its founders, until a few years ago it was deemed necessary to form two Chapters. This arrangement has succeeded admirably, and more actual work is now accomplished than ever before.

The reunions which take place every year bring the life and active members into contact with each other, thus strengthening the bond of interest between them. This year the reunion will be held on April 9th.

A movement is now being made to raise funds for the purpose of building a Somerville Hall. The advantages of such a structure are obvious.

Among other conveniences there will be provided a library for the one thousand volumes now in the possession of the Society.

THE DELPHIC LITERARY SOCIETY.

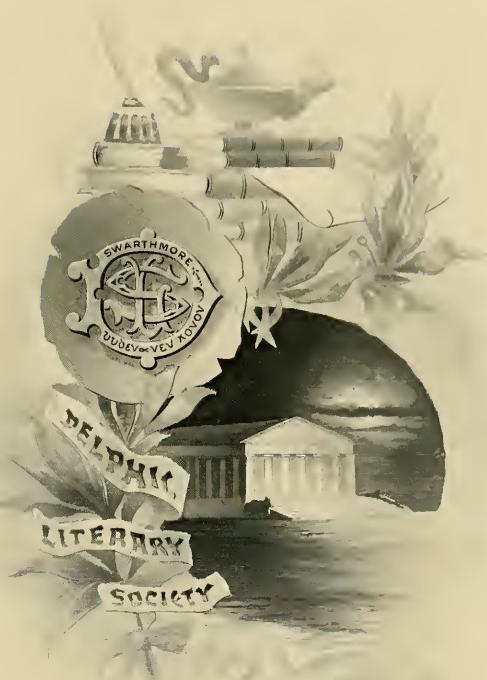

EARLY in the Fall of '73 there was founded at Swarthmore, by a number of young men of literary taste and oratorical aspirations, a society for the cultivation of this latent ability. The growth and development of this society has resulted in an organization which, though youngest of its kind in point of years, is second to none in the college.

The struggle for existence in the early years of its incipiency served to develop that degree of perseverance and strength of purpose which perfected the organization and placed it in the front rank of literary societies. It has ever been a generous rival, as it can well afford to be, and has sent into nearly every State and Territory, graduate members who have won honor and distinction for their Alma Mater.

The unusual merit and worth of its library of thirteen hundred volumes, containing historical as well as literary treasures; the high grade of the periodicals that cover the table of its reading-room; its Underwood prize for debates, offered yearly to the lower classes, by Wm. G. Underwood, '87; the recent founding of a monthly paper, The Delphic Oracle, on the editorial staff of which a beginning in the great field of journalism is effected; these are but the most prominent examples of characteristics, which in themselves speak for its excellency.

A glance at its roll of membership testifies to its popularity, and its mock trials, its rendition of the farce and drama, its joint meetings with the Somerville, have become pass-words of success and interest throughout the college. Though somewhat cramped for room on account of its large membership, its work has been none the less superior, and the consummation of a project already nearing completion, in the form of a Society Hall, will greatly enlarge its scope of usefulness.

SCIENTIFIC SOCIETY.

TWO years previous to the destruction of the college by fire, members of the Scientific and Engineering courses, in order to study more closely questions pertaining to their work, established the Scientific Society.

The exercises of the Society consist of essays and discussions, with occasional lectures. Only subjects of a purely scientific nature are discussed, and the thoroughness with which the work is done adds greatly to the benefits derived from membership in the Society.

Only students pursuing Scientific or Engineering courses are eligible to membership, and until recently no one below the Sophomore class was initiated into the Society. The roll of members has consequently been small, but enthusiastic work has amply compensated for lack of numbers.

FOR many years there was felt among the students, especially those of the engineering department, a desire to cultivate that branch of the course pertaining to architecture, and it was to thoroughly develop this tendency that in 1890 the Swarthmore Architectural Society was founded.

The meetings of the Society are held bi-weekly, and its work is almost entirely of an architectural character, consisting of individual designing in the methods of construction, sketches in pen and ink, water-color, and charcoal, together with essays on the subjects under discussion. A library of some of the best architectural papers and periodicals is being gradually collected by the Society.

Much of this year's success has been due to a course of lectures on "Early Architecture" by Prof. Milton H. Bancroft, who has always given his valued aid in furthering the welfare of the Society.

THE LATIN SEMINARY.

IN these days of rapid advancement, the importance of collateral reading in connection with all branches of study, cannot be overestimated. This need had long been felt in our study of the ancient Latin writers, but it was not until recent years that any decided movement was made. In 1885, Prof. Henry W. Rolfe organized the society after the plan of the "seminars" in the German universities, and gave it the name of the "Latin Seminary."

The organization did not presume to make as deep or extensive investigation as the German universities, yet the work was so arranged that in time an ideal seminary could be developed.

Our attention has successively been directed to mythology, ancient art and customs, famous buildings of Rome, translation of Horace into English verse, and study of the construction and arrangement of the Roman house. This year the author under consideration is Cicero, treating in detail his life, oratory, and philosophy, and many discussions have been held regarding the varied glimpses of his character.

The meetings are interesting and instructive, and the wide range of subjects brought before the students from time to time serves to lay a firm foundation for further investigation in the classical world.

FRATER-
-NITIES

IN ORDER OF ESTABLISHMENT

WARRIOR

FRATERNITIES.

THE strongest element in human nature, man's sociability, naturally leads him to band together, in all ranks of life, with his fellows. The Fraternity is the phase which this element has assumed in college life. The functions of literary and athletic associations having been allotted their places in these pages, it will not be amiss to state briefly the resources and benefits of the Fraternity.

The tie which binds a number of young men or women together in a Fraternity is a pledge of common responsibility. Each one is personally interested in and responsible for the moral character, reputation, quality of work, and social standing of every other. This alone is an important factor in reducing the evils of student life. Many a prudent college executive has availed himself of this fact in reaching, through Fraternity associates, some wayward student, and with complete success.

Fraternities serve the same purpose as athletic and journalistic associations in bringing together at conventions representatives of different institutions, and diffusing a spirit of inter-collegiate friendship; the Fraternity, however, can accomplish this purpose better perhaps than any other organization because of the openness of brotherly feeling which pervades all its proceedings.

The lack of home influences and the benefit of family friendship is largely made up by this Fraternity spirit. In those institutions where the absence of a dormitory system requires boarding and lodging in town, the chapter-house serves the purpose of a home and saves materially in expense. Plans are being made for the building of chapter-houses at Swarthmore when the growth of the college shall require increased accommodations for the students.

Fraternity life which is firmly established now as a feature of Swarthmore, commenced early in the college year of 1888-'89, when the Pi Chapter of the Kappa Sigma and the Penna. Kappa Chapter of the Phi Kappa Psi Fraternities were chartered and established. Both these Chapters have been most prosperous and grown steadily. They hold regular meetings at their respective rooms in Media, some three miles from the College. At present the chief social events are the annual banquets held in Philadelphia.

The success of these Chapters and the same needs for a Fraternity led the young women of the College to apply for a charter, which, in the spring of 1891, was granted to Swarthmore by Kappa Alpha Theta. The Alpha-Beta Chapter of Kappa Alpha Theta was established in September of 1891, and appears for the first time in the pages of the HALCYON. We wish this new daughter of Hellenism the success which has attended her two sons, and trust that the prosperity of this Chapter will equal that which the ladies' Fraternity has achieved in the rest of the Greek world.

ATHLETICS

THE YEAR'S WORK IN ATHLETICS.

ACH HALCYON, in reviewing the work of our athletic teams, finds from year to year some new feature upon which to comment—greater improvement in team work, older or better material, or more interest displayed, greater victories gained, new lustres added to Swarthmore's triumphs on the foot-ball field, the diamond, and the track. If this has been true of the past, it is no less so of the present, and Volume VIII chronicles the deeds of the most successful year that has ever been witnessed by the "Little Quaker College."

To the careful guidance of a competent director and to the earnestness with which the men entered last spring into the work of training, we owe our success, that of being for the second time champions of the Pennsylvania Athletic Association. Although the prospects at the beginning of the year were not of the brightest order, yet by careful, conscientious training a team was developed which easily proved its superiority on the twenty-third of last May, by winning the coveted cup.

In base-ball our team showed marked improvement over the one of the previous season, and was able to compete successfully with the stronger amateur clubs.

Although base-ball was the first branch of athletics to be introduced at Swarthmore, it is almost a new department for our athletes, for but little interest was displayed in the game previous to three years ago, when it was placed upon the same level with foot-ball and track athletics.

Lacrosse was introduced for the first time last spring, and although fairly successful, it is scarcely possible that Swarthmore, owing to her lack of numbers, will ever take a prominent part in this Canadian sport. The previous HALCYON committed an error when it placed the members of the Lacrosse Association under the heading of the "Swarthmore Independent Athletic Association."

The eleven which this year represented Swarthmore, was, as the Phanix stated, probably the strongest team which ever disputed for the garnet's honor upon the foot-ball field.

Never before have the men been more suitable for foot-ball work; not that they were stronger or older; but that they knew how to work together and had learned that all essential principle of team work.

When we look back at the magnificent showing made by the team in the latter part of the season, we deeply regret that some provision could not have been made by which the men might have been better prepared to meet the first two games. May this year's failure to win the pennant but encourage future teams to labor more zealously for that desired end.

As the HALCYON draws the curtain upon the year's work, it is with a feeling of pride for our Alma Mater that we have been able to present a record of such brilliant achievements. When the reader remembers that we are not a university with hundreds to select from, but a small college with a few score only, he may well be surprised that we have been able to do with our limited numbers what our rivals have failed to accomplish with their hundreds.

SINCE her entrance into college, the class of '93 has ever been prominent on Whittierfield, but it was not until her Sophomore year that she achieved fame as a class, and aided very largely in winning the cup of the Pennsylvania I. C. A. A.

Success began, however, in Freshman year, with the achievement of the College championship in the tug-of-war contest, at the In-door Sports. The first attempt of the class in track athletics, namely, the "Freshman Sports," was productive of six broken records.

Fool-ball was the central athletic event demanding our attention in the fall of Sophomore year, and after diligent training, a strong class team was organized. Not only were we victorious in every struggle, but we closed the season without having permitted our opponents to score. Our old rivals, the Haverford Sophomores, were defeated by a score of 36 to 0.

The contest for the Phoenix Cup, which occurred on May 16th, was the most successful annual meeting ever held on Whittierfield, and as a result of it "'93" is engraved upon the trophy.

The championship in base-ball also fell to the class after two very close and well-played games with '94. Thus the season was closed with the unprecedented record of one class in possession of both cups.

CLASS OF '93.
JUNIOR YEAR.

*When we had this point arriven,
And the task to us was given
To exert our wit and wisdom for the pleasure of our friends,
In a body to Flarnassus,
As have staffs of former classes,
Hied we, seeking through the Muses to attain the wished-for end.
But as up we climbed quite boldly,
Sad to tell, they met us coldly,
And refused, without more parley, any skill of theirs to lend.*

*"Some are Engineers, some Letters,
And that fact our music fitters,
Send all Classics here to seek us if you wish for any song."
And in spite of our protesting,
For we thought them surely jesting,
They at last made us believe it, to stay longer would be wrong.
Go, you see, we haven't "backing;"
That explains, if aught be lacking,
In our thought, or rhyme, or measure, as our pens do scratchin' on.*

RESPECTFULLY DEDICATED TO THE
LITERARY STUDENTS OF THE VARIOUS CLASSES, in the fervent hope that, in view of this distinguished consideration, they may be induced to lay aside, for a few moments, at least, their ever-pressing and arduous duties and glance hastily through the present volume, which otherwise they might pass unnoticed in their ceaseless round of toil.

THE SLEIGH-RIDE.

The day had been bright and so sunny,
The Seniors were feeling right funny;
They hired a sleigh
This cold winter day,
To aid thus their fun with their money.

Out on the asphaltum they waited,
The cold and the driver berated,
'Til one of them said,
With shake of the head,
"We'll telephone to the belated."

So then to the office they hurried,
Their minds and their looks all so flurried.
"Oh! where is our sleigh,
And driver, we pray?"
"Long since they've been sent!" Then they worried.

While Seniors some stories relating,
Or time and the distance debating,
Some cute Ninety-threes
Ran out past the trees,
And stood at the corner in waiting.

For sleigh and the sleigh-bells they listened,
The moon on the snow, how it glistened;
The sleigh came in sight,
They piled in all right,
If right ones the driver ne'er questioned.

When Ninety-three boys were returning,
The Seniors were talking concerning
 The ride they would take
 And fun they would make,
To show that they, too, had some learning.

They now tried their art at persuading,
The driver stood firm 'gainst their raiding ;
 The hour was late,
 They fought against fate,
For night into day was now fading.

But winter with snow and with sleetting,
The Seniors regret how 'tis fleeting.
 Each night now they pray
 For snow and a sleigh,
With rugs and with blankets for heating.

ANSWERS TO THE INQUISITIVE.

“UPHOLSTERER.”—Yes, cushions would be a valuable addition to the Meeting House Benches. Offer your suggestion to the Managers.

“CHESTNUT.”—“Comrades” or “That is Love” is probably the piece you heard the orchestra play.

“SONG AND DANCE.”—We can recommend “Hints to Beginners,” by Fred. N. Carr, as a good guide for a person anxious to prepare himself for the variety stage.

“STUDENT.”—The heaviest body in the world is the Faculty, judging from the effects it produces when it sits upon anything.

“MILK.”—We have no idea what becomes of the one million three hundred thousand tons of chalk annually imported into this country.

“CHIPS.”—You have been misinformed; there is no such organization as the “Professors’ Poker Club,” at least, not that we know of.

“ANTI-FAT.”—Try a month’s board on our lunches.

THE CRUM NAVY.

'Twas long ago, before we all
Had grown so old or half so tall,
Upon this campus there did grow
(The reason no one seems to know),
An institution of great size,
For boys and girls to patronize.

Among the marvelous things t'were done,
When first that college was begun,
In sports of every description,
Tradition tells us there were none
Could truly half compare with some
That were accomplished on the Crum.

Still, if that reason is not so,
Since Swarthmore first began to grow,
Nobody now seems to know why
The Catalogue ne'er ceased its cry,
Nor, furthermore, what has become
Of all that “boating on the Crum.”

Many features we must confess,
Other than this it did possess.
Yet all in Catalogue portrayed,
None seemed so awfully absurd
To him who had set in his mind,
“Good boating on the Crum” to find.

For when you now look on that stream,
How different everything does seem;
You either think it must have shrunk,
Or else those ancient sons have drunk,
’Til near each drop has disappeared
From out its banks with mud besmeared.

MISSING HISTORICAL LINKS.

Swarthmore University's Rich Contributions to the Science of Archæology.

Work was begun a few days ago upon the new fifteen-hundred room dormitory of Swarthmore University, at 279th street and Chester avenue. The new building will stand upon the brow of the hill on which, in earlier times, if tradition speak the truth, there stood a small cottage, the nucleus of the present world-famed university.

Archæologists have been looking forward with a great deal of pleasure to the time when the present work should be begun, for all have been of the opinion that much might be discovered concerning the early life of an institution, the pioneer of the system of co-education now so universally adopted.

Nor have these lovers of the antique been disappointed. Scarcely had the work begun when the laborers commenced to find strange looking articles of various sorts, all carefully labeled, apparently with the owner's name. The first strange instrument to come to light resembled a lady's curling-iron, but the fact that it was found in the western section of the building,—which part, tradition tells us, was reserved for the young men—would seem to indicate that the implement was used for some other purpose. Upon the handle was engraved the inscription, "R. C. M., '93."

Near by was unearthed a miniature stable, fastened together by small hasps, or "ketches," as they were called by the people of that day. Inside were found numerous skeletons of animals much like the horse, but of smaller size.

Among the débris now covering the spot where once stood the extreme southwest corner of the first college building, was found a small bottle, by some wonderful agency escaped from breakage and mishap. Even the label could be deciphered with comparative ease, "Hart's Anti-Fat." The compound, a small particle of which was remaining, will be given to some eminent chemist for analysis.

Numerous antique articles of clothing were also unearthed, among them a curious gentleman's head-dress, peculiar to the nineteenth century. Though somewhat worn with age it has an air of eminent respectability and worthiness which it may have borrowed from its owner. Inside its cylindrical silkiness was an ancient visiting card, from which was obliterated all save the final four letters, "GILL."

The following is a list of old volumes and MSS. discovered yesterday. It is taken from the note-book of Professor Plotzkivi, the Russian Archæologist who is now visiting America for the especial purpose of being present while these excavations are in progress: "Art of Smiling" (thesis), by J. H. R., '93; "How I took Thirty-three Periods per Week," by P. H. K., '92; "Why our Plans always Fall Through" (investigations), class of '92; "Foot-ball vs. Co-education as a means of Recreation" (an argument), Jay F. M. and S. H. M. Jr.; "Why I scorn Under-Classmen," by Miss Joe.

THE SCHOLAR'S NEW YEAR DREAM.

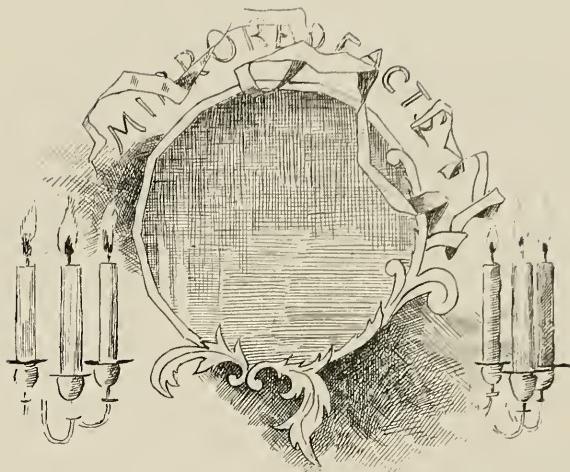

IS midnight, and without fast falls the snow,
Before the fire, in all its ruddy glow,
The scholar sits and watches the shadow,
As softly over every vellum row,
From topmost shelf, till reaching far below,
With highest touch it plays both to and fro.

The night wears on, the dying embers gleam ;
The shadows die, and in the distance seem
Like some poor demon in unhappy mien,
Who vainly strives for riches which do teem
On every side and yet are all unseen.
Still sleeps the scholar wrapped in his dream.

But now he groans and moves in his arm-chair,
He sees himself in yonder demon there,
From shelf to shelf he vainly seems to tear
In search of hidden treasure very rare,
By which he could make all the world aware
That still among us reigns Minerva fair.

He seems to feel spread o'er him with delight
Fantastic sounds of music sweet and bright,
As if the Muses touched their harps so light,
And leaning from their grand majestic height,
Wrapped in that white but ever silent night
Their rarest gifts revealed to his sight.

The fire has long since become cold and drear,
The shadows with their weirdness disappear,
Upon the snow the silver moon shines clear,
And all the clouds disperse without a fear,
"Good omen," quoth the scholar with a tear
For that fair dream and for the glad New Year.

SYNOPSIS OF A SWARTHMORE FARCE.

ACT I.

Chateau de Swarthmore on banks of the Crum. Time, midnight.

SCENE I.—Duke Humphrey's chamber. Duke and Duchess slumbering. Billy, a sentinel, appears. Exit at end of corridor to right.

SCENE II.—Darkness prevails. Conspirators in background. A loud crash as of thunder. The Duke appears in robe de S'more. Conspirators disperse. Silence reigns.

SCENE III.—Dark room in west wing of chateau. Scuddy, a conspirator, enters breathless and exhausted, in a state of great alarm. Other conspirators advance from background. Duke Humphrey's step is heard in corridor. All exeunt through window. Figures flit by in moonlight along "ledge."

ACT II.

At the Chateau de Swarthmore. Court of King Charles. Spacious hall opening into splendid saloons. Reception-room to left.

SCENE I.—Small room in chateau. Night before court scene. Scuddy surrounded by admiring friends. Intense excitement prevails.

SCENE II.—Hall of Justice. King Charles upon his throne surrounded by Officers of State. Enter Scuddy and others.

SCENE III.—Reception-room of the chateau. Witnesses enter—Haines, Bob, and Johns, Scuddy trembling in the rear. Esther, Captain of Royal Body Guard, enters. All maintain a painful silence. Court proceeds. Exeunt all save Captain, who scrutinizes witnesses as they pass. Door closes and many are seen shaking Scuddy's hand.

ACT III.

Court of King Charles. Second day of trial. Throne in centre of stage. A semi-circle of chairs heavily draped in leather on either side. Pictures of ancestors adorn the walls.

SCENE I.—King Charles upon the throne. Duke and Duchess Humphreys upon the left. Judges in the foreground. Nobles, Soldiers, and Retainers of Court grouped around. Enter Captain Esther followed by witnesses. Exit witnesses to right. Enter prisoner Scuddy. Betrays symptoms of astonishment, yet great excitement. Prisoner exits. As curtain falls Duchess Humphreys is seen to wipe a tear from her eye.

SCENE II.—Interior of Scuddy's apartment in chateau. Time, evening. Scuddy, thoughtful and dejected, sadly contemplates a note from Prince Arthur. Enter Senior Walter, in whom Scuddy confides. They read the sad decree of the judges. Both exit, evincing the greatest excitement.

SCENE III.—Chateau de Swarthmore bathed in moonlight. Scuddy's banishment. Great excitement prevails throughout the chateau. Scuddy and friends exeunt en "train."

SCENE IV.—Hall of Justice. Reception-room Court adjourns. Great doors thrown open and a brilliant assemblage advances. Duke and Duchess in high glee. All exeunt. King with proud bearing and decided step, followed by Queen Elizabeth, Prince George, Count William, Sir Edward, Prince Arthur, Lady Sue, and Milton. Grand finale, all leave the stage singing "Home, Sweet Home."

OUR CAPS AND GOWNS.

IS "Progress" has e'er been the magical word
That often to duty our members has stirred.

As athletes or students 'tis ever the same,
Departures, improvements, still add to our fame.

To meeting we hied, as have juniors before,
But not in such garments as Juniors of yore.

Demure and so plain, in our garments of black,
In dignity surely we never did lack.

The Seniors, they stared, and in wonderment stood ;
Their staring and wondering ne'er did any good ;

Tho' well might they ponder in sorrow, and moan
For honors that no more were wholly their own.

The sad turn of fortune forbids them to wear
Those emblems of dignity we cannot share.

That you, future Juniors, this privilege gain,
Results from our progress and Ninety-three brain ;

And Swarthmore herself gained a custom quite new,
Because Ninety-three dared to plan and to do.

A custom which first with much mirth was assailed,
But the scorn and the jesting long, long since have failed,

And those who opposed it, would fain put it down
Admit now the triumph of good Cap and Gown.

A more classic ripple has noble Crum Creek,
Since black-gowned Juniors her borders do seek ;

It gives the whole campus a studious air,
To see "mortar-boards" flitting hither and there.

But not to the campus, nor yet to old Crum,
From this great reform have the blessings all come.

"Preservers of dignity" may they be styled,
Reminding the Junior he is not a child :

That gone are his kittenish, Sophomore days,
Ne'er, ne'er to return from the past's misty haze,

While already, outlined in the future, he sees
In his mind's eye, the thesis and longed-for degrees.

These, then, are our reasons (we have many more),
Why we left the old ruts of Juniors of yore.

And now every one, from no matter which wing,
Is ready the praise of the garments to sing.

With laurels and honors his brow we could crown,
Who first gave to Juniors the Cap and the Gown.

EVOLUTION.

In dim and by-gone ages when society first began,
They had not yet developed any educational plan.

Cain and Abel had no college, their fun was very slow,
Nor did they have a sister for other boys to know.

In their life no foot-ball games, no Greek and girls were blending,
What wonder that Abel came to quick and direful ending.

But Time shook off his hour-glass and many a change was wrought,
And the world was full of boys who an education sought.

The girls, poor things, they had no souls, no intellect, no mind,
In fact, a girl had little good that ancient seers could find.

Again Time shook his hour-glass and things began to change,
Among the fields of learning, a few bright maids did range.

[And let the girls once get a start in anything on earth,
Of workers in that self-same field there will not be a dearth.]

So all the girls began to learn, and learned their lessons well;
Why all the women were so smart, the men could scarcely tell.

Then by affinity's wondrous law whose mystery we do not see,
By each boy's school, a girls' school came, as close, as close could be.

And then what plans the teachers laid to keep the two apart,
The trials of those same teachers would wring a tender heart.

But 'twas a useless task indeed, to break the law of ages,
For boys and girls did soon outwit the grave and reverend sages.

At last the knotty problem must have elucidation,
They wracked their brains; burnt midnight oil; result—co-education.

OUR CLASSES.

Who think they know just what to do,
Whose schemes quite often though fall through ;
But such fast friends we seldom knew,

AS THE SENIORS.

Who wins in ball and gains the prize,
What class is noted for its size,
Both large and small ; but, oh ! how wise !

THE JUNIOR.

Who wear the "black and the old gold,"
Whose name denotes their faults we're told ;
Who are too young to be so bold ;

THE SOPHOMORES.

Who still enjoy their childhood days,
And as the wise man often says :
"We'd know them by their kittenish ways,"

THESE FRESHIES.

Only a few months old are they
'Til apron-strings are cut away.
Our judgment then we must delay,

OF THE SUBS.

DURING former years the students of the college have at various times appointed so-called Song Committees, for the purpose of procuring new Swarthmore songs. Although the members of such committees doubtless fulfilled their duties in a most acceptable manner, owing to their productions being in manuscript form only, very few of them have been preserved and handed down to the under-class men of to-day.

Realizing that as our college grows older, Swarthmore, as well as her sister institutions of maturer years and greater numbers, should have a collection of songs peculiar to itself, THE HALCYON presents to its readers the limited number it has been successful in obtaining, not expecting that they will be used as a book of college songs, but with the hope that they will be an incentive to our students and Alumni to compose new ones, and that they may form a nucleus around which a collection worthy of our beloved Alma Mater may soon be gathered.

 Hail, Alma Mater, hail thee!
 Fair Swarthmore! prosper long!
 And may we never fail thee!
- 4 We pledge our hearts and hands,
 Loved college mem'ries linking;
 Where'er in distant lands,
 We'll oft thereon be thinking!

- 5 O, Swarthmore, ever dear!
 No time our bonds shall sever!
 Through joyous days and drear,
 Our hearts are thine forever!

FOXY GEORGE.

Words by ED. MARTIN, '78, & G. E. H. WEAVER, '82

The musical score consists of three staves of music. The top staff uses a treble clef, the middle staff an alto clef, and the bottom staff a bass clef. The key signature is F major (one sharp). The time signature changes between common time (2/4) and common time (4/4). The piano accompaniment is provided in the bass and alto staves, with specific instructions like "ritard." in the middle staff.

 Bricks on brick from morn till night;
 Do not think they build the College;
 They but choose and mark the site.

 With such elements to build from,
 We will rear it to the skies.

Tempo di valse.

Music by STEWART W. YOUNG.

1. Under thy shadow we gather together, Children of many a differ-ent land;
2. Fire cannot blast thee, and storms cannot wither; Time and his sickle o'er thee have no pow'r;
3. Dear as the soft sighing breeze to the forest, Dear as the twilight to nightingale's call,
4. Then lift up your voices, brave sons and fair daughters; Waken to music the song that ne'er dies!

Bound by the tie of one wise loving mother, Reach to each other our heart and our hand.
Still in our hearts thou livest forev-er, Growing in beauty from hour unto hour.
Sweet as the music that steals o'er the waters, So dear to our hearts is our old College Wall.
Wreathe her a crown that no ages can wither; And blazon her glory for aye in the skies.

D CHORUS. A tempo. ff
Tribute of love to the love that bends o'er us, Ring the glad music o'er land and o'er sea.

Send thro' our country the echoing chorus, — Swarthmore, old Swarthmore honor to thee !

THE SUPE.

Words by E. MARTIN '78, & J. E. VERREE, '83.

1. The Supe he leads a jolly life, He's free from ev'ry care and strife.
2. But still 'tis not a happy life, Although he has no care nor strife,

CHORUS.

- Of Swarthmore grits he eats the best, The Supe he fills a downy nest.
To meeting he must weekly troop, Oh, ho! I'm glad I'm not the Supe.

- 3 The Prof. he better pleaseth me,
His life is one of jollity,
Yet from his pipe he must swear off,
Oh, ho! I'm glad I'm not the Prof.

- 4 So when my smoking cap I doff,
I'll be the Supe and not the Prof.,
And when to meeting I don't troop,
I'll be the Prof. and not the Supe.

ROLL ON TO FAME.

Words by J. E. VERREE, '33.

Tune.—Landlord, fill the Flowing Bowl.

Tune, "Mary had a little lamb."

RACHEL HAD A LITTLE LAMB.

Words by Edw. Martin '78, and J. E. Verree, '83.

Rachel had a little lamb,
Little lamb, little lamb,
Rachel had a little lamb,
Its face was white as snow,
And everywhere that Rachel went,
Rachel wen, Rachel went,
And everywhere that Rachel went,
The lamb was sure to go.

It gamboled out of class one day,
Class one day, class one day,
It gamboled out of class one day,
And sought the nursery door.
And in a sickly voice did bleat,
Voice did bleat, voice did bleat,
And in a sickly voice did bleat,
My head is very sore.

But Rachel was not fresh as he,
Fresh as he, fresh as he,
But Rachel was not fresh as he,
She was onto his tricks,
She grabbed him by the neck, did she,
Neck did she, neck did she,
She grabbed him by the neck, did she,
And poured down number six.

Alas! Alas! That little lamb,
Little lamb, little lamb,
Alas! Alas! That little lamb,
No more we'll hear its bleat.
A marble stone is at its head,
At its head, at its head,
A marble stone is at its head,
Another at its feet.

Tune, "The Mermaid."

A SONG OF VICTORY.

To commemorate Swarthmore's victory at Haverford in the Foot-Ball game of November 22d, 1890.
Score, 30-14.

Words by F. P. B.

Twas Saturday noon when we set out,
And we had not far for to go;
For our Swarthmore boys were to play a lusty
bout
With the Haverfordians O.

Chorus.

Oh! the autumn sun shone bright,
And the autumn winds did blow—did blow;
While our brave fellows went rushing to the top
And Haverford stayed down, below, below, below,
And Haverford stayed down below.

Then up spake the captain of the "black and red,"
And a bold spoken man was he;
"We must weaken the side that's coming out
ahead,
Or, alas! we all beaten shall be,"—Cho.

So they took from our line our valiant "centre rush,"
And a strong, true man was he;
But the boys that were left were no concessive
mush,
And they played for victory.—Cho.

Then "rah! rah! rah!" did greet our gallant team,
As they bravely ran up the score:
And Haverford stopped with only fourteen,
While Swarthmore had sixteen more.—
Cho.

Tune, "Tramp! Tramp! Tramp!" etc.

Words by Josephine Tilton, '86.

SONG OF THE CLASSES.

We're the Graduating Class,
Formed of many a lad and lass,
And ere long we will from Swarthmore's
halls depart;
It is sad it must be so,
From our friends we have to go,
And alone must battle with the world
apart.

Chorus.

Onward! Onward! we are striving,
Gaining knowledge as we may;
Co-education is our cry,
And we shout it up on high,
The important part of Swarthmore's walls
so gray.

We're the Juniors, grave and meek,
With our Latin and our Greek,
And our books are always with us in our hand;
We go bravely at our work,
Which we never think to shirk,
And in class do always very highly stand.
Chorus:—Onward! etc.

O the jolly Sophs are we,
With the planting of our tree,
Which we do in the spring-time of every year;
And we watch with zealous care
Lest there may be some who dare,
To hurt that which to our hearts is very dear.
Chorus:—Onward! etc.

Now 'tis easy to behold,
We're the Freshmen young and bold,
And perhaps we're not now quite what we should be;
But with troubles we contend,
And endure them to the end,
But improvement in us they ere long shall see.
Chorus:—Onward! etc.

Tune, "John Brown's body," etc.

OUR ATHLETES.

Written in commemoration of Swarthmore's victory at the Pennsylvania Inter-Collegiate Athletic Games, held in Philadelphia, Fifth month 23d, 1891.

Words by E. P. B.

Our eyes have seen the glory of our athletes on the track,
They did meet the bold contestants, and have left them on them on the rack,
For their hearts were set on victory, and of pluck there was no lack,
While they went dashing on.
Chorus: Glory, glory, hallelujah, etc.

The garnet waved about them, and the Cup
gleamed in their sight,
And the shouts of eager brothers cheered to deeds of skill and might,
And the foeman lagged behind them, left in
but a sorry plight,
While they went dashing on.
Chorus: Glory, glory, etc.

Their hammers fell the farthest and their vaulters mounted highest,
And their hurdlers, fleetly running, were the first to make the goal;
Their tuggers tugged the strongest, and their jumper jumped the longest,
While the walkers went walking on.
Chorus: Glory, glory, etc.

The secret of their victory in a Shell is said to be,
In the strict rules they have followed, training
hard and manfully,
They've won the Cup and glory, which they'll
keep from year to year,
While they go training on.
Chorus: Glory, glory, etc.

Tune, "Marching Through Georgia."

MARCHING THROUGH SWARTHMORE.

A song suggested by the triumph gained by Swarthmore over the other colleges of the Inter-State League, winning from the University of Pennsylvania, the championship cup of the State. May 17th, 1890.

Words by Abby M. Hall, '90.

Bring the good old bugle boys,
We'll sing another song;
Sing it with a spirit,
That will start the world along.
Sing it as we love to sing it,
Voices good and strong,
While we are marching through Swarthmore.

Chorus.

Hurrah! hurrah! we sing of old Swarthmore!
Hurrah! hurrah! for our gallant tug-of-war!
So will sing her athletes,
Who are plucky to the core,
While we are marching through Swarthmore.

How old Swarthmore shouted
When she heard the joyful sound :
How her children hailed the cup,
Her noble athletes found ;
How the very oak trees,
Even started from the ground,
While we are marching through Swarthmore.

—Cho.

Yes, and there were 'Varsity men,
Let fall most woeful tears,
When they lost the silver cup
That they had held for years.
Lost and gained by us
They deemed unworthy of their fears,
While we are marching through Swarthmore.

—Cho.

"Swarthmore's quiet Quaker lads
Will never push us most."
So the Pennsylvanians said,
And 'twas a handsome boast,
Had they not forgot alas!
To reckon with the host,
While we are marching through Swarthmore.

—Cho.

Tune, "Nut-Brown Maiden."

OUR COLLEGE.

Words by '93.

Swarthmore College, thou art a happy home
for us,
Swarthmore College, thou art a happy home ;
A happy home art thou, dear ! The leaving of it's sad, dear !

Swarthmore College, thou art a happy home
for us,

Swarthmore College, thou art a happy home.

Swarthmore College, thou hast both boys and
girls so true,

Swarthmore College, thou hast both boys and
girls,

Both boys and girls hast thou, dear. Who love
thee e'er and now, dear ;

Swarthmore College, thou hast both boys and
girls so true,

Swarthmore College, thou hast both boys and girls.

Swarthmore College, thou hast a social life,
ideal,

Swarthmore College, thou hast a social life ;
A social life hast thou, dear ! The liking of it's ours, dear !

Swarthmore College, thou hast a social life,
ideal,

Swarthmore College, thou hast a social life.

HERE'S TO GOOD OLD SWARTHMORE.

Here's to good old Swarthmore,
 Drink her down, drink her down !
Here's to good old Swarthmore,
 Drink her down, drink her down !
Here's a health to Alma Mater,
 For to us there is no greater,
 Drink her down, drink her down!
 Drink her down, down, down !

Here's to our good old classes,
 Drink her down, drink her down !
Here's to our good old classes,
 Drink her down, drink her down !
Here's to our good old classes,
 Jolly lads and rosy lasses,
 Drink her down, drink her down,
 Drink her down, down, down !

Here's to that old ham,
 Drink her down, drink her down !
Here's to that old ham,
 Drink her down, drink her down !
Here's to that old ham,
 For which we didn't care a——cent,
 Drink her down, drink her down,
 Drink her down, down, down !

Tune, "Orange and Black."

THE GARNET OF SWARTHMORE.

Arranged by E. P. B.

Although Yale has always favored,
 The violet's dark blue,
And the gentle sons of Harvard,
 To the crimson rose are true,
We will carry on our banner,
 High above us ever more,
Sign of strength and speed and valor,
 Brilliant garnet of Swarthmore.

Through the four long years of college,
 'Midst the scenes we know so well,
As the mystic charm to knowledge,
 We vainly seek to spell ;
Oh, we win athletic victories,
 Running up a famous score,
Still we work for Alma Mater,
 And the garnet of Swarthmore.

When the cares of life o'ertake us,
 Mingling fast our locks with gray,
Should our dearest hopes betray us,
 False fortune fall away ;
Still we'll banish care and sadness,
 As we turn our mem'ries back,
And recall the hours of gladness,
 Neath the garnet of Swarthmore

SOCIOLOGICAL

THERE is no phase of social science that gives students and economists greater concern than the growing tendency to centralization of wealth. There is, however, no occasion for alarm. Life insurance, which is a distributor of wealth, is growing faster than wealth. There are in the coffers of the companies of this country Nine Hundred Million Dollars, Eleven Billion more pledged, and already One Hundred and Fifty Million Dollars are being distributed annually through nature's law of mortality which is no respecter of persons—it applies alike to the rich and poor, and, therefore, makes an impartial distribution.

“THE FOUSE SYSTEM” OF LIFE INSURANCE, OPERATED BY The Fidelity Mutual Life Association, 914 Walnut St., Philadelphia, is acknowledged to be the most equitable and economical system of life insurance extant.

THE FIDELITY has had a conservative, substantial growth. In its first year, the insurance written amounted to $1,318,000; in its thirteenth year, it amounted to $13,136,800.

It now has a cash surplus of nearly $500,000, which was increased the last year 37½ per cent. The insurance in force was increased 24.57 per cent., and on January 1, 1892, it had 15,005 members, representing $33,579,750 insurance.

THE FIDELITY has paid in losses and claims $1,338,569.50, at a cost to the deceased members of only $110,598.60. At old-line rates, this latter sum would have purchased only $671,353 insurance. While the beneficiaries of deceased members received 100 per cent. more than they would have received under the old-line system, the living members, during the thirteen years of the company's existence, saved nearly $4,000,000. The Fidelity's motto is low cost and absolute security.

L. G. FOUSE, President.

PURE SPICES Flavoring

FOR FAMILY USE.

HE almost universal adulteration of spices is well known to those who have given the subject any attention. Notwithstanding a package may be nicely put up, and labeled "Pure," or even "Warranted Pure," it is deplorably true that an examination of the contents, in many cases, has revealed the presence of a cheapening ingredient, or that the spice has been ground from an inferior crude material. We give to our

FLAVORING EXTRACTS

the same careful attention. Vanilla we prepare from the best quality of Mexican Bean, by a process of our own, which gives us the perfect aroma of the bean in all its delightful freshness, richness, and purity. This statement will be verified by all who have used our Extract. We ask those who have not done so, to give our Extracts a trial.

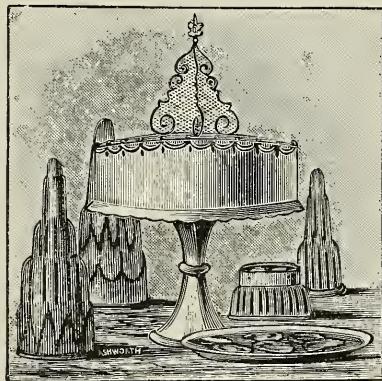

These Extracts are offered in bottles containing two and four ounces, half pints, pints, and quarts.
